Lurlene McDaniel's life was turned upside down when her husband, David, died suddenly at the age of 54. She was left reeling from grief and loss, and she didn't know how to go on without him.

In Last Dance, McDaniel shares her raw and honest account of her journey through grief. She writes about the pain of losing her best friend and soulmate, the loneliness and isolation she felt, and the anger and resentment she grappled with.

But McDaniel's story is not just about grief. It's also about hope and resilience. She writes about the ways she found to cope with her loss, the people who helped her to heal, and the lessons she learned about herself and about life.

Last Dance is a beautifully written and deeply moving memoir that will resonate with anyone who has ever experienced the pain of losing a loved one. It is a story of grief, but it is also a story of hope and resilience.
