Emily Carter is a young woman with a passion for travel and a knack for getting into trouble. When she sets off to Paris for a romantic Valentine's Day getaway, she expects nothing more than a week of sightseeing, delicious food, and maybe a little romance. But when she witnesses a murder in the iconic Louvre Museum, she finds herself drawn into a deadly game.

The victim is a wealthy art collector, and Emily soon learns that he was involved in some shady dealings. As she digs deeper into the case, she finds herself crossing paths with a charming detective, Jean-Luc Dubois. Jean-Luc is handsome, intelligent, and seems to be genuinely interested in Emily. But is he really who he seems? Or is he just using her to get close to the truth?

As Emily and Jean-Luc investigate the murder, they uncover a web of secrets and lies that reaches the highest levels of Parisian society. They learn that the victim was involved in a dangerous art forgery ring, and that his death may have been part of a much larger plot. As they get closer to the truth, Emily and Jean-Luc find themselves in danger. They are followed, threatened, and even attacked. But Emily is determined to find the killer, even if it means putting her own life on the line.

Valentine's Day Murder in Paris is a thrilling cozy mystery that will keep you guessing until the very end. With its charming characters, intriguing plot, and beautiful Parisian setting, this book is perfect for fans of Agatha Christie, Nancy Drew, and anyone who loves a good mystery.

Excerpt

Emily stepped out of the taxi and into the cold Parisian night. She shivered slightly as she made her way to the entrance of the Louvre Museum. She was here to meet her friend, Sarah, for a Valentine's Day dinner at the museum's restaurant. Emily had always dreamed of visiting Paris, and she was excited to finally be here. The city was even more beautiful than she had imagined, with its iconic landmarks, charming streets, and delicious food.

Emily entered the museum and made her way to the restaurant. She was early, so she decided to take a quick look around. She wandered through the galleries, admiring the paintings and sculptures. She stopped in front of the Mona Lisa, and she couldn't help but smile at the famous painting. She had seen it so many times in books and magazines, but it was even more impressive in person.

Emily was about to move on when she heard a commotion behind her. She turned around and saw a group of people gathered around a man lying on the floor. Emily gasped as she realized that the man was dead. A security guard was kneeling beside him, checking his pulse. Emily could see that the man had been stabbed in the chest.

Emily's heart started to race. She had never seen anything like this before. She wanted to run away, but she couldn't bring herself to leave. She needed to know what had happened.

"What happened?" Emily asked a woman standing nearby.

"I don't know," the woman said. "I just saw the man fall to the ground. He was bleeding from his chest."

Emily looked around the gallery. The other visitors were staring at the dead man in shock. Some of them were crying. Emily felt sick to her stomach. She needed to get out of there.

Emily turned and ran out of the museum. She didn't stop running until she reached her hotel room. She collapsed on the bed, her heart still pounding.

What had she just seen? Who had killed the man in the Louvre? And why?

Emily knew that she had to find out the truth.
